New Jervois Chief Executive Commences

The Jervois group (“Jervois”) is pleased to advise that experienced industry executive Conor Spollen has commenced as Chief Executive Officer of Jervois.

With over 35 years of experience in the minerals and metals processing industry, Conor brings a wealth of knowledge, leadership, and a strong track record of success. Conor has demonstrated a deep understanding and commitment to driving operational excellence, sustainability, and long-term strategic growth. He has held senior operations and project execution leadership roles in multiple jurisdictions at prominent mining and metals organisations, including Vale, Anglo American, Outokumpu, US Steel and Li-Cycle.

Conor holds a Bachelor of Engineering in Minerals Engineering and a Master of Business Administration. He will be based in the United States.

His extensive experience in operations, projects and start-ups of complex metallurgical facilities will be key in leading Jervois into the next phase.

Under Conor’s leadership, Jervois will continue to execute its strategy to operate and develop geopolitically strategic assets, maintaining business relationships with suppliers and vendors and continuing to service customers with a focus on quality and reliability. Jervois’ work with Western governments to secure critical mineral supply chains across vulnerable and strategically important industries will also continue.
